Kickstarter Supports Naked Cosmonaut Battling Crystal-Pooping Aliens to Revive a Barren Universe

Vancouver Island, CANADA - Help a naked cosmonaut strapped to a jetpack breathe life into a procedurally generated universe while confronting epic boss battles in 30/30's uniquely stylized inaugural release, "Cosmochoria". Back its Kickstarter this April and help solidify indie game development as the future of the industry.

Intent on capturing the beauty and loneliness of space, Cosmochoria's art boldly contrasts a child's imagination with the cruel tranquility of the vacuum of space. The gameplay stems from an unwavering dedication to an era of simple game design dedicated to escalating challenges, gratifying upgrades and high-score competition. An original and ambient soundtrack accompanies sparse moments of peaceful exploration. Produced by a collaboration between Ilkae & Zebra, whose experimental electronica has long been influenced by classic videogames, and Mantrakid, the musical alter ego of Nate Schmold, creator of Cosmochoria.

30/30 is the culmination of Nate's creative ventures, each of which has strived to make the world a weirder place. Cosmochoria, currently in alpha development, is the next mutation of in Nate's evolution of delivering creative and immersive entertainment experiences.

Here's what Cosmochoria's audience have to say about its current Alpha release:

Indie Games: "It's a blend of the two genres, combining elements of both with colorful imagery and atmospheric background music to create something fresh."

IndieStatik: "One of the most enjoyable portions of the game is simply the relaxing nature of loneliness."

Hardcore Gamer: "There is no part of this game that doesn't sound completely awesome."
